Mission & Areas Served

Statements

Mission Statement

KCVLAA is a nonprofit, 501(c)(3) organization that provides legal and accounting assistance to qualifying artists and arts organizations from all creative disciplines. Our ArtSmarts program provides seminars in arts law to help artists avoid common pitfalls in their professional arts careers.

Background Statement

Kansas City Volunteer Lawyers and Accountants for the Arts was founded and incorporated as a 501(c)(3) organization in May 2004. With the high concentration of artists and arts organizations in the Kansas City area, a separate local organization was needed to serve the arts community. Several people and organizations, including the Arts Council of Metropolitan Kansas City, the St. Louis Volunteer Lawyers and Accountants for the Arts, the Texas Accountants and Lawyers for the Arts, Julia Austin, Jane Lowery, and Rebecca Stroder had been working on this project since November of 2003. With encouragement and support from the St. Louis Volunteer Lawyers and Accountants for the Arts and the Missouri Arts Council the state of Missouri was divided into two areas of service. KCVLAA's primary service area is greater Kansas City, and western Missouri (including Springfield, but not including Columbia: St. Louis's VLAA serves Columbia), and five counties in eastern Kansas: Leavenworth, Johnson, Wyandotte, Douglas and Miami counties.

Impact Statement

KCVLAA was established to meet the demand for legal and accounting services at an affordable rate. We are a unique organization that fills a necessary role for Kansas City's artists and arts organizations and we will continue to, - provide legal and accounting assistance to artists and arts organizations from all creative disciplines that could not otherwise afford it; - demystify legal and accounting practices for individuals and organizations working in creative fields; - establish resources for the most current professional practices related to the arts and art management; and - assist individuals and organizations in developing excellence in their professional practices. KCVLAA provides pro bono (free) legal and accounting services for qualifying artists and arts organizations. Without KCVLAA, the legal and accounting problems of many artists and arts organizations would go unresolved. KCVLAA provides a critical link between members of the legal, business and arts communities. A thriving arts community contributes to a positive economic and social environment for all of us. Because familiarity with arts law and business practices can help avoid legal and accounting problems, KCVLAA has an extensive education program for both arts professionals, attorneys and accountants. Seminars typically focus on nuts-and-bolts information such as protecting copyrights, negotiating contracts, or preparing budgets. We also offer approved CLE/CPE programs to lawyers and accountants on the topics faced by the arts community. Through KCVLAA, more than 160 accountants and lawyers offer counsel to artists and administrators who are asking for help in record numbers. Since our inception KCVLAA volunteers donated over $500,000 in pro bono services to the arts community. KCVLAA hopes to increase the number of artists served through our seminars and referral process. In 2014, we served over 400 artists, in 2015 we hope to increase this number to over 425. KCVLAA is also actively searching out additional collaborations for our events. KCVLAA had successful collaborations with the InterUrban Art House, Midwest Music Foundation, and Kansas City Artists Coalition in 2014.

Needs Statement

1. Additional funding from a variety of sources, with a focus on individual donors.
2. The establishment of an internship/volunteer program to insure a steady source of volunteer help.
3. Expansion of our programming via additional funding and increased volunteers.
4. Recruitment of additional Board members and Board succession planning.

Board Chair Statement

Our challenge is in funding – to have strong leadership for the organization we must be able to compensate staff on a comparable level to other organizations. That leadership is what KCVLAA needs to increase outreach, visibility, and develop programs and recruit volunteers. Our current director is a self-starter and is dedicated to our mission. She has a strong program administration background. She has moved our record-keeping on-line and has streamlined our processes and is committed to increasing our earned income and outreach. Our biggest challenge, of course, lies in funding. Nevertheless, because we are able to partner with so many other organizations to take advantage of resources like space, mailing lists, advertising, and equipment, our overhead can be low. In addition, we can draw upon the many volunteers in our organization to provide services for which we would otherwise have to pay: speaking engagements, interns, and copy services, to name a few. We also can position ourselves within the market for arts-related funding in a unique way. After all, we provide a service to the arts community that is without peer in the area, and our services help keep other arts organizations afloat. Our board is made up of many well-respected individuals in the legal, accounting, and arts community, whose contacts and visibility can be leveraged to provide grounding for our requests for funding. Overall, however, the arts community's enthusiasm for our presence in the area leads me to believe that these challenges, while formidable, can be overcome in the coming year. The KCVLAA has been received warmly by this community, and I have no doubt that it will attain the support of both the funding community as well as the legal, accounting, and arts communities for years to come. Going forward, we must make our organization more visible to organizations, and we must not hesitate to initiate requests for strategic partnerships with organizations who can help us promote our services to a broader range of people in the arts community. This opportunity to leverage the popularity of our services will only strengthen as our organization grows and our partnerships with other arts organizations become deeper because familiarity with arts law and business practices.

CEO Comments

KCVLAA refers arts-related legal and accounting problems to attorneys and accountants who volunteer their time to help individuals and arts organizations with limited resources. The first requirement is that the legal or accounting problem or issue is directly arts-related. Our definition of "art" is broad and encompasses the visual, literary, media, design, and performing arts, as well non-traditional arts forms. To qualify for free professional services, the client must be able to demonstrate genuine financial need. These guidelines are designed to determine eligibility, while providing flexibility for extenuating circumstances. While KCVLAA is primarily a referral program, education in arts law and business practices is an important part of our mission. We conduct ArtSmarts seminars, provide guest speakers, and we are building a library and starting "how-to" guides – all in an effort to help artists protect their rights and develop sound business practices.
